Seeking WW II Vets

For a British Broadcasting Co. documentary, "Soldiers," tracing the history of warfare, I am seeking World War II veterans. Specifically, former Seabees who worked on airstrip construction, beachmasters at Guadalcanal, Tarawa, Iwo Jima or Okinawa, Red Ball Express drivers, bazookamen and anti-tank gunners. Such veterans may call me collect at 212-581-7100.—Betty Scharf, BBC, 630 Fifth Ave., Room 2153. New York, N.Y. 10111.

Double-Standard

Half of Fortune Magazine's 500 corporations are headed by veterans, but half of them are on President Reagan's committee to balance the budget. These men are all in the quarter of million to a million-dollar a year bracket and they want to cut down on medical treatment for veterans, close up military post exchanges and eliminate cost of living allowances for federal retirees. The same budget committee recommends pay raises for government executives. How can we have faith in our politicians with this double-dealing going on.—John Ryan, 47-26 46th Street, Woodside, N.Y. 11377.

Graveside

We would like to urge all veterans and their families to write to their Senators and Congressmen that graveside services for a deceased veteran mean services beside the grave and not in the chapel. A member of one of our VFW Posts in Casper was interred recently in the new national cemetery. The entire service, including the folding of the U.S. Flag and presentation to the next of kin, was conducted in its entirety from the chapel.—Lyle Puetzman, Commander, Post 10677, Casper, Wyo.

Correction

Cutlines of a picture in VFW in Action (April) showing Gen. William C. Westmoreland autographing a mural bearing his likeness at Post 6166 in Hermitage, Pa., should have read, "Westmoreland dedicated a monument to Mercer County's 40 dead from the Vietnam War" instead of "Hermitages's"

LEGISLATIVE:

HOUSE PASSES HEALTH, HOUSING, COMP BILLS: Under suspension of the rules, the House of Representatives passed the H.R. 5618, supported in testimony by the VFW. H.R. 5618, the Veterans Health Care and Facilities Improvement Act of 1984, authorizes the VA to establish special units for treatment of post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD); to fill prescriptions for treatment of a veteran's service-connected disability when the prescription is written by a non-VA physician; reformulates security operations at VA hospitals and permits appointment of VA police officers; expands the State Veterans' Home Grant Program by authorizing acquisition of existing buildings for state homes and requires the VA to annually review per diem rates; extends for one year the VA's authority to provide care in non-VA facilities in the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico; and extends indefinitely the VA Geriatric Research, Education and Clinical Center (GRECC) Program.

Passed also was H.R. 5617, the Veterans Housing Amendments of 1984, to increase from $32,500 to $35,000 the specially adapted housing grant for severely disabled service-connected veterans; from $5,000 to $6,000 the one-time grant to a special category of service-connected veterans to make necessary adaptations to their homes; the maximum VA loan guaranty for a conventional home from $27,500 to $30,000; and the maximum guaranty for a manufactured home from $20,000 to $22,000. It requires that new grave markers in national cemeteries be upright except in specific instances where flat markers are requested by either the veteran or his or her survivors.

H.R. 5688, the Veterans Compensation Amendments for the fiscal year 1985, passed by the House, increases compensation, Dependency and Indemnity Compensation (DIC), additional compensation for dependents and the clothing allowance for certain disabled veterans by 4.3% effective Dec. 1, 1984; adds lupus erythematosus systemic to the list of chronic diseases for which there is a presumption of service-connection; requires the VA Administrator to establish an advisory committee on veterans exposed to ionizing radiation; increases Servicemen's Group Life Insurance from $35,000 to $50,000 and the one-time automobile allowance for certain service-connected veterans from $4,400 to $5,000, as well as permitting reimbursement for adaptive equipment on a new car if the veteran divests himself of title to an old car so equipped and establishes a five-year pilot program so veterans under 50 who apply for non-service-connected pension after Sept. 30, 1984, can enroll in the Vocational Rehabilitation Program under chapter 31, 38 USC.

SENATE PASSES HERBICIDE, RADIATION EXPOSURE LEGISLATION: The VFW lobbied strenuously, even launching a grassroots write-in campaign; members of the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee negotiated hard. Result: Passage by a 95 to 0 rollcall vote of amended S. 1651, the Veterans' Dioxin and Radiation Exposure Compensation Standards Act.

In passing the bill, the Senate struck the language of House-passed H.R. 1961, the Agent Orange and Atomic Veterans' Relief Act, substituted the wording of S. 1651 and returned it to the House of Representatives. The two versions of H.R. 1961 represent widely different philosophies on issues of herbicide and radiation exposure of great importance to the veterans concerned and their families. Because of this, Commander-in-Chief Clifford G. Olson, Jr., wrote the chairmen of the Senate and House Veterans' Affairs Committees urging them to redouble their efforts in conference to prevent this legislation from dying because they could not reach a compromise.

SVAC REPORTS HEALTH CARE BILL: The Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee has reported S. 2514, the Veterans Administration Health Care Amendments of 1984. Early Senate action is anticipated. Its major provisions would amend title 38, U.S. Code, to improve the management of VA medical treatment programs by referring veterans to non-VA facilities and arranging for additional necessary services. Included also are provisions that would revise and clarify the authority for furnishing care for veterans suffering from alcohol or drug dependence: require the VA Administrator to establish the position of Associate Director for Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder; require the Administrator to submit a report to Congress regarding VA programs for hospice and respite care to certain veterans; and to authorize the VA Administrator to furnish telecaption television decoders to totally deaf veterans in certain cases.

It's Been A Great Year

By Clifford G. Olson, Jr.
VFW Commander-in-Chief

This has been a great year for the Veterans of Foreign Wars and one which I will long remember, for it brought me into closer contact with the most wonderful people in the world — you, my comrades, of our great organization and sisters of our Ladies Auxiliary.

Everywhere my travels took me — whether in the United States or overseas — I was thrilled by the dedication and devotion to the VFW and to the veterans we all serve.

Critics of this country, either the homegrown variety or outside the United States, some time should take the opportunity to meet some of the same people I have this past year and see for themselves just what the real Americans are like — how they work for their communities, how loyal they are to the United States and its ideals and how committed they are to the causes all of us in the VFW espouse.

They will come away with a far different view of this country and its people from the pre-packaged, standard carping that one reads and hears. All too often the litany of American shortcomings appears in the nation's principal journals of opinion and television commentary.

We have been fortunate in the past year to have had as Administrator of Veterans Affairs a man like Harry N. Walters. He has proved in many ways and on many occasions sensitive and responsive to veterans' needs and concerns. As he pointed out so often, he answers to the President, not the Office of Management and Budget.

Frequently one hears criticism of the Department of Defense budget being too high — as if money allotted to defending the country would automatically go into a wide range of social programs. These objections are raised, unhappily, with even greater emphasis at a time when the nation is engaged in critical national elections and when decisions affecting the United States' security for years to come are being weighed and made.

All of us in the Veterans of Foreign Wars are well aware of where weakness will lead us. Those of us who remember Pearl Harbor fully understand that perceived divisions and irresolution, coupled with military inadequacies, led to a disaster that could have doomed this country. We are convinced, too, that without a strong national defense, all the other material benefits of life in our democratic republic will be nothing. In this world today, there is no prize for second best.

While this may have been a spectacular year for the Veterans of Foreign Wars in all its undertakings, sad notes were sounded. The families of 241 Marines killed in the Beirut airport by a terrorist's bomb received our most heartfelt sympathy, as did the survivors of 18 soldiers killed in the successful rescue operation on Grenada.

The tragic shooting down of Korean Air Lines Flight 7 on Sept. 1 by the Soviet Union with the loss of all aboard demonstrated once again the nature of America's adversary. Shoot first and lie later is its policy, and all Americans must be aware of this.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars scored several victories in Congress this past year. The most notable probably was the passage by the House and Senate of the bill, initiated by the VFW, to aid victims of Agent Orange and radiation exposure. It was sent to a conference committee to reconcile differences between the House and Senate -passed versions. Thanks to VFW demands, too, survivors of military personnel killed in the line of duty will not have to pay taxes on their beloved one's income.

One disappointing aspect of the year was resurrection by another veterans' organization of its old and fallacious claim to sole credit for the World War II GI Bill. The VFW supported passage of this legislation and Past Commander-in-Chief Bernard W. Kearney, then a member of the House, co-authored the bill and actually made it possible for a colleague to get to Washington in time to vote for it.

Since this allegation by this veterans' organization had not cropped up since 1969, it was assumed that after the VFW had exploded it so often that it died. Not so, apparently.

To underscore its charge, the other organization reprinted a letter to Congress signed by representatives of the three other veterans' organizations and the VFW alleging this demonstrated opposition. The letter actually was an appeal for a different method of granting these and more benefits in order that all World War II veterans would receive something of tangible value — not just those who were able to take advantage of the bill's special benefits. In fact, most of the benefits contained in the original GI Bill of Rights already had been introduced in separate pieces of legislation and some were starting to move through Congress.

When the bill was signed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, Commander-in-Chief Carl J. Schoeninger and Past Commander-in-Chief Paul Wolman, who chaired the VFW's Legislative Committee, were accorded places of honor at the ceremonies.

It seems to me all veterans' organizations should look to the future instead of looking back into the past to claim credit, unearned at that, for doing what they were mandated to do.

You may be sure the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States will not stop working for legislation that will benefit all veterans, their dependents and their survivors.

That was why it was established 85 years ago and today is the oldest major veterans' organization in the United States.

Thanks to all of you for the privilege of serving you and this great organization.

Let's Go To Chicago

Time is running out but you can still register early for the 85th National Convention in Chicago from Aug. 17 to 24 by sending in advance registration coupon accompanying this article and save $2 on the regular $8 fee.

The 85th National Convention will be the fifth the VFW has held in Chicago since the end of World War II, a tribute to the city's facilities and the esteem in which Chicagoans hold the VFW.

At the 1980 National Convention in Chicago, Ronald Reagan, fresh from winning the Republican presidential nomination, addressed the VFW, referring to the Vietnam War as "a noble cause" and pledging that his Administration would work vigorously for an accounting of Americans missing in Southeast Asia and the release of any Americans held prisoner in that region.

With the observance this year of the Truman Centennial, the 100th anniversary of the birth of former President Harry S Truman, a World War I veteran and VFW member, the 1944 National Convention in Chicago is sure to stir memories of many VFW oldtimers.

Then the Democratic vice presidential nominee who succeeded President Franklin D. Roosevelt eight months later, Truman who had been a senator from Missouri, outlined the provisions of the GI Bill.

This legislation was passed and signed into law with VFW support only a little more than two months earlier and contained provisions which the VFW had advocated since the organization's beginning in 1899.

Indeed, a member of the House of Representatives and Past Commander-in-Chief, Bernard W. Kearney, co-authored the bill and played a decisive part in obtaining its passage.

Truman told the delegates "that bill intends to give returning soldiers an opportunity to get into the civilian set-up of the country on a basis where we will not face appleselling and things of that sort, as we did after the First World War."

Prophetically, he concluded that the veterans of World War II "are going to try to see that this production machine of ours can be made to work for the welfare of the world instead of for its destruction, because civilization cannot go through another conflict such as the one through which we are going now. There will be none of us left."

Highlights of the 85th National Convention will be the annual Memorial Service, the Joint Opening Session, the Military Parade, the March of Champions, formerly called the Million Dollar Pageant of Drums and the Pageant of Youth in Music and the election of National Officers on Aug. 24, concluding the National Convention.

Senior Vice Commander-in-Chief

Billy Ray Cameron, a Vietnam veteran of Sanford, N.C., is expected to succeed Commander-in-Chief Clifford G. Olson, Jr., and Jr. Vice Commander-in-Chief John Staum, of Minneapolis, to move into the office now held by Cameron. Under the VFW's rotational system, it is the West's turn to present a candidate for Junior Vice Commander-in-Chief. With several prospects, this contest has generated much interest.

During the business sessions, delegates will study and then adopt or reject a large number of resolutions relating to veterans' issues and national security.

A high point of the Convention, as always, is the presentation of awards to major figures in defense, sports, entertainment, space exploration and other aspects of the nation's life.

The VFW's highest award, named for Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, is to be presented to Secretary of State George Shultz.

Among the others to be honored this year are the McLaughlin Group, the News Media Award; John J. Norton, the chief of the California Highway Patrol, the J. Edgar Hoover Award; Bud Grant, retired coach of the Minnesota Vikings, the Hall of Fame Award; Lee Iacocca, president of the Chrysler Corp., the Citizenship Award; Gen. P.X. Kelley, Marine Corps commandant, the Armed Forces Award; Marine Cpl. Jeffrey Nashton, the Americanism Award; and members of the crew of Space Shuttle Flights 9 and 10, the Space Award.

OFFICIAL CALL

85th National Convention

Veterans Of Foreign Wars Of The United States

This 85th annual National Convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States will be held at a critical time in the history of our country and, indeed, the world.

The United States is faced with challenges to its security and that of its allies throughout the world by the Soviet Union and its Communist bloc satellites and surrogates. This is evident in Europe, the Middle East, Africa and especially in Central America, so close to our own borders, where the forces of freedom are in deadly peril. In the face of these dark threats, the VFW is committed to a strong American defense and opposition to those who would weaken the nation.

Under attack from a wide range of hostile elements are veterans' hard-won rights and entitlements provided them by a grateful American people through their elected representatives in Congress.

These assaults come in a variety of guises, but as is usually the case the most common mask is that of economy. The VFW has succeeded in beating back these offensives in the past because of its unity and strength of membership. To achieve victory in future battles, even greater unity and an even higher membership will be required.

In slightly more than two months after the 85th National Convention, the 1984 national elections will be held. In order to preserve the gains veterans have made, it is essential that only candidates pledged to safeguard and strengthen the nation's defenses and the gains veterans have made over the years — expanding them where necessary — be sent to Washington.

Yours in comradeship,

Clifford G. Olson, Jr.
Commander-in-Chief, VFW

Dems, GOP Get VFW Platform Views

Cooper T. Holt, Executive Director of the VFW Washington Office recently presented the Democratic and Republican platform committees with the veterans' organization's suggested planks on veterans' issues and national security. Here are texts of both.

Veterans' Benefits

WE PLEDGE not only to maintain the Veterans Administration as an independent agency primarily charged with the care and well-being of veterans; but, also, to elevate the Administrator of Veterans Affairs to cabinet level.

WE PLEDGE that no national health insurance plan will be approved which would, or could, invade the VA hospital and medical care system.

WE PLEDGE that no reorganization plan will be submitted which would abolish in whole, or in part, any of the functions of the VA and its programs, or transfer any function or program to any other agency.

WE PLEDGE that a realistic budget for the VA will be proposed to maintain the integrity of the VA hospital and medical care system and the entitlement and benefit programs.

WE PLEDGE that no honorably discharged veteran who served in our Armed Forces during a period of war or hostility in need and seeking medical care will be denied that care by the VA.

WE PLEDGE that we will actively support legislation to resolve the problems of World War II veterans exposed to ionizing radiation and Vietnam veterans suffering from herbicide exposure.

WE PLEDGE that we will reject any proposal to eliminate or reduce compensation payments to veterans with service connected disabilities or additional allowances paid for their dependents.

WE PLEDGE that we will pursue improvement in the Veterans Administration's pension program for veterans in need due to their nonservice connected disabilities.

WE PLEDGE that we will give serious consideration to granting a special pension to World War I veterans and their widows.

WE PLEDGE that we will uphold and support veterans' preference in Federal employment.

WE PLEDGE that we will actively oppose any proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution which does not specifically exclude veterans' preference, veterans' entitlements and benefits, and women from combat wherein they would be required to seek out, close with, and destroy an enemy.

WE PLEDGE that we will propose an adequate budget for the Department of Labor to permit the Assistant Secretary for Veterans Employment and Training to meet properly the needs of unemployed veterans, particularly disabled and Vietnam veterans.

WE PLEDGE that we will reject the Grace Commission's proposal to alter the way in which the VA disposes of repossessed homes when veterans default on insured loans.

WE PLEDGE to expand the VA National Cemetery system more rapidly so that a veteran will be provided a final resting place in a national cemetery in his or her own state reasonably near his or her survivors.

National Security

WE PLEDGE that we will attempt to maintain for the long term a figure of a least 8 % of the Gross National Product for defense requirements.

WE PLEDGE to continue strategic defense and other high technology research and development programs.

WE PLEDGE to continue the modernization of our strategic forces, continuing the production of the MX missile, B-1B bomber and Trident submarine.

WE PLEDGE to continue the modernization of our conventional forces, supporting the recommendations made by the Joint Chiefs of Staff that would expand our Army and Air Force.

WE PLEDGE to support the men and women of our Armed Forces by providing them adequate compensation and preserving their commissary, medical and retirement programs.

WE PLEDGE to adopt and maintain a foreign policy that will improve the political unity and military capability of the NATO alliance.

WE PLEDGE that we will attempt to resolve the issue of prisoners of war and missing in Southeast Asia by bringing maximum economic pressure on the countries involved until the issue is resolved.

WE PLEDGE to reestablish formal ties with our oldest Asian ally, the free Republic of China on Taiwan.

WE PLEDGE to provide the necessary aid for the Republic of Korea to maintain and safeguard her freedom.

WE PLEDGE to combat the spread of Communist subversion, terrorism and influence in this hemisphere.

WE PLEDGE to support and assist the freedom-loving people in all Communist-controlled nations in their struggle for freedom.

Guam — 40 Years Later

By Joseph C. Murphy

It is quiet now, 40 years after. The white sand beaches are still there. The coconut trees, once ripped and torn, fly gently in the tropical breeze.

And today the glorious American Flag, the Stars and Stripes, also flutters above the Guam beaches of Asan and Agat.

There is something else on the beach, once bloodied by U.S. Marines. It's a tour bus. Out of the bus step 55 young Japanese honeymooners, complete with cameras and snorkeling gear. Guam, for those who haven't heard, has turned into the Bermuda of the Pacific, the Tahiti of the North Pacific.

Daily jumbo jets fly in from Tokyo, a bare three hours away, bringing in thousands of Japanese tourists, who think of Guam as their place in the sun.

The Japanese presence is large on Guam, despite the fact that it remains a U.S. territory. Sitting beside the Guam Hilton, on luscious Tumon Beach, are Japanese hotels like the Dai-Ichi, the Japan Plaza, the Fujita and the Okura.

Guam today is nothing like the Guam veterans of World War II remember. Frankly, it had a terrible reputation during the last stages of the war, mainly because the battle, one of the ugliest in the Pacific, had leveled the capital city of Agana and wiped out all the island's buildings and most of its vegetation. Hundreds of thousands of American troops and hundreds of ships came to Guam during that last year before the fall of Japan.

It became Tent City, and then Quonset Hut City. The mosquitos were fierce, and the rain came down in buckets, triggering what the GI's called "the island crud." It was a hell of a place to be stationed while awaiting orders to push on to Japan.

Guam is different today. It is a typical (in some ways) American community, with solid schools, big churches, high rise apartments, offices and hotels. It has cable TV, with 14 channels of American TV programming. It has the largest McDonald's in the world, along with Pizza Hut, Shakey's, Denny's and drive-in banks.

Veterans will have a chance to return to Guam this year. The government of Guam hosted a massive 40th anniversary party on July 21, which is the big Liberation Day celebration on Guam. It featured parades, carnivals, fiestas and military plane fly-overs.

Dr. J. Henry Hoffmann

Gov. Ricardo J. Bordallo issued an invitation to all veterans, American and Japanese, to return to the scene of the battle.

This gorgeous tropical island, now with a population of 110,000, has more than 60,000 vehicles today. There is an expression which says: "If we ever have to evacuate Guam, nobody will have to ride in the back seat."

It is really a majestic place, despite what the U.S. military men thought about it during those rough days of 1944 and 1945. The beaches are great. The air is breath clean. The water, perfect for diving and snorkeling, or boating, is like azure. The weather is tropical, which means warm, but it is usually tempered with a breeze blowing off the Pacific. It has its jungles, its waterfalls, its caves and its charming old native villages.

Guam also has its history. And nothing was quite so dramatic as those few days in July, 1944.

The island was "discovered" by Ferdinand Magellan on his round-the-world voyage of discovery in 1519. He found here a race of brown skinned Chamorros, who had really discovered the island a thousand years before. These Chamorros used high speed sailing canoes called proas and had an intricate civilization of their own. Later the Spanish missionaries came on the Spanish galleons. Guam had a college in the early 1600s.

The U.S. took Guam away from the Spanish in the Spanish-American war of 1898, along with the Philippines and Puerto Rico. It stayed as a backwater territory for the next 40 years. The U.S. Congress, unworried about Japanese aggression, refused to fortify Guam.

Then, while the Japanese fleet bombers were blasting Pearl Harbor in 1941, other Japanese planes were hitting Guam. A couple of days later an invasion fleet appeared, and 6,000 Japanese landed on Tumon. The few hundred American defenders could offer only token resistance.

During the two and one half years of Japanese occupation the intensely patriotic Guamanians were beaten, beheaded and forced to work on the airfields and other fortifications the Japanese were building. American Flags were hidden. An American sailor survived the whole occupation in a cave, fed by the Guamanians, and songs were written about "Uncle Sam, Please Come Back to Guam."

Then, on June 6, the same day American, British and Canadian troops began the invasion of France at Normandy, the Marianas invasion forces steamed west from the Marshall Islands. Included were more than 127,000 troops, carried on 535 ships, more vessels than are in the whole of today's Navy. On June 15 they struck Saipan. It was close to being a disaster. Of every nine Marines who stepped off a landing craft in the Marianas, two were killed or wounded. On Saipan alone, 3,273 American Marines, sailors or soldiers were killed and nearly 11,000 wounded.

The dive bombers and fighter-bombers began to hit Guam by the middle of June. Then, with Saipan nearly secured, the ships moved 160 miles south towards Guam. On July 8, the heaviest aerial and naval bombardment of the Pacific war began. For 13 straight days, 40 major ships stood off-shore pounding the planned invasion beaches and fortifications. Included in this barrage were six battleships, 32 destroyers and eight cruisers, along with carriers and several hundred aircraft.

Early in the morning of July 21 the invasion of Guam began with more than 54,800 troops engaged in two assaults, the northern assault on Asan beach, and the southern attack on Agat beach, surrounding Apra Harbor.

The fighting was fierce, complete with banzai attacks, and hand to hand combat. It was a brutal battle, with the Japanese having the advantage of the high hills and caves overlooking the exposed landing beaches.

But by Aug. 10 most of the organized resistance had been eliminated. U.S. forces suffered just over 7,000 casualties, and the Japanese lost 17,250, with only 1,250 prisoners taken. A few hundred managed to escape into the jungle, where they were picked off over the next months and years. In fact one man, Shochi Yokoi, was finally grabbed by two Guamanian hunters in 1972, after spending nearly 29 years in the jungle. He was the last of the Emperor's soldiers.

The Japanese had rounded up all the Guamanians, then numbering about 29,000, and herded them into concentration camps in the interior of the island. They all genuinely believed that they were going to be killed.

There was no more dramatic moment in the Pacific war than when that first Marine patrol came across the Guamanians huddled in their jungle camp. Suddenly there was complete, eerie silence. Then out came those long hidden American Flags. They were waved wildly, amid warm, wild shouts of gratitude. Battle-hardened Marines broke down and wept openly at the sight. Uncle Sam had come back to Guam.

Four years ago Congress authorized a War in the Pacific National Historical Park at the site of the invasion beaches on Guam. This national park is designed to commemorate the bravery and sacrifice of those participating in the Pacific Theater of World War II and to conserve and interpret outstanding natural, scenic and historic values on Guam for the benefit and enjoyment of present and future generations. Thus far, some of the land for the park has been acquired and plans formulated for the park, but limited funding has prevented much actual construction.

The park is equally dedicated to memorializing Americans, Japanese and the islanders upon whose homelands these battles raged. The park is administered by the U.S. National Park Service.

Among the many concerns facing development is the restoration of park areas to the way they looked just prior to the combat and the heavy shelling. This requires, in part, that the types of trees present in early 1944 be replanted in the park areas. These trees were primarily coconuts, with some mixtures of other shoreline trees.

The American Cancer Society on Guam, under the leadership of Dr. J. Henry Hoffmann, developed the concept of sponsoring the planting of coconut and other tree varieties as a way of enhancing the park, providing a means of memorializing the war effort and raising funds for the ongoing war against cancer. The Society is seeking worldwide participation with special efforts to involve all persons who were directly involved. The primary goals of this project are to establish living memorials to the war participants and to contribute to the living research service, rehabilitation and education commitments of the American Cancer Society. (See "Plam Trees for Guam Memorial Aid Cancer Study," March.)

Dr. Hoffmann, a dentist and writer, has appeared in Washington and other areas to explain the project. Vern Harper, commander of Guam's VFW Post 1509 could also be contacted.

Guam, of course, is still vital to the U.S. military and to U.S. interests in the Pacific. It is the home of Andersen AFB and its SAC bombers. The U.S. Navy still has large facilities here, including a communications station, a submarine tender, a ship repair facility, a Naval air station and a large supply depot.

This island, 40 years after, is seeking another political option, commonwealth status, but still under the United States Flag.

Joseph C. Murphy is editor of the Pacific Daily News/Sunday News, published in Agana, Guam's capital.

The War in the Pacific National Historical Park at Asan is planned to restore the beach area to the same condition it was in before Americans landed in July, 1944, to retake it from the Japanese. A major project is the planting of coconut palm trees.

When GIs Marched in Paris

By Jim Condon

"Whoever gave an order like that?" I asked my company commander.

At dawn on Aug. 29, 1944, we awoke in the Bois de Boulogne, a sprawling park in western Paris. This day the entire battle-weary 28th Infantry Division assembled to march through Paris in a parade.

To me, a parade seemed risky. The Germans had evacuated the French capital only four days before and then air-bombed it, killing over 200 civilians. Even now the German 7th Army was setting up for a major battle just beyond the northeast border of the city. In a parade, we would march in close formation, offering the enemy a gigantic, concentrated target.

At the time, I was second in command of E Co., 112th Infantry and felt personally responsible for the security of the men. How often since our commitment to combat in Normandy had I yelled, "Don't bunch up!" Keeping well spread out under enemy fire had always meant fewer losses. But today, with the enemy still so close by, all elements of our division would mass together in a vulnerable formation. Who ordered the parade?

My CO's answer to me was brief: "General Eisenhower."

As I learned much later, the supreme commander ordered the parade to solve military as well as political problems. Gen. Charles de Gaulle had asked to borrow two U.S. divisions as a show of force in Paris and to establish

On its way to fight the Germans on the other side of Paris, the 28th Division marched through the city on Aug. 29, 1944, in a giant victory parade. A 28th Division veteran recalls that August day 40 years ago.

American support of him as leader of the French people.

Eisenhower decided he could not afford to detach two divisions from his campaign. Instead, he offered to march an infantry division through Paris to the front, now northeast of the city. It would pass in formal review before de Gaulle and others. (The reviewing stand an upside-down Bailey bridge.) Eisenhower afterwards wrote, "I felt this show of force and de Gaulle's presence on the reviewing stand would accomplish all that he sought."

Now, the division's 56-piece band sounded off and, in full battle dress, the 28th marched down the Champs Elysees.

Leading in jeeps were the division commander, Maj. Gen. Norman D. Cota, and the general staff. After the M-8s of the 28th Recon Troop came the 112th Infantry Regiment, together with the 110th, marching in massed battalions. 24 men abreast.

Attached tank destroyer, anti-aircraft, field artillery, chemical, engineer and medical units followed in their vehicles. The 109th Regiment was behind. Division artillery units were next, guns massed at the head, vehicles in a column of four.

The Parisians reacted ecstatically. Crowds lined the boulevards. Beautiful black-haired young women on bicycles rode our flanks. Thousands of citizens cried out, "Vive les Americains!" We hadn't received such a tremendous boost in morale since...when?

Farther along the route, a group of school children yelled, "Boche kaput!" The words made me feel for a moment that the war had ended, with us as the victors. But as we approached the Arc de Triomphe, I snapped back to reality again. Our ranks split down the middle as we marched around the symbol of victory, not through it. Celebration of success in August, 1944, would have been most premature. Ahead lay Belgium, Luxembourg, the Hurtgen Forest, the Siegfried Line, the Ardennes.

Nevertheless, we glowed as Parisians cheered and waved homemade American Flags. They were crudely fashioned, with the wrong number of stars and stripes. Yet who among us could feel anything but extreme pride?

Nevertheless, we glowed as Parisians cheered and waved homemade American Flags. They were crudely fashioned, with the wrong number of stars and stripes. Yet who among us could feel anything but extreme pride?

Soon we received an official welcome. As we passed the reviewing stand, I peeked out the corner of my eye, and there he stood, Gen. de Gaulle himself. He towered almost a foot over our own Generals Bradley and Hodges, not counting his tall pillbox-type French military cap. De Gaulle touched his cap in salute.

During the entire parade, our feet became the only casualties. As I wrote on the back of a photograph to my mother some time after, "The cobblestoned streets ruined our feet. They were sore for the next two weeks on the push toward the Siegfried Line. Love, Jim. P.S. How about some candy?"

Later a U.S. three-cent stamp commemorated the parade with an etching made from a photo taken at the time. I was able to identify myself in the first row!

As we limped toward the end of the route, I had to admit to myself that the parade had accomplished at least one tactical advantage. The march had shifted our 28th Division from the southwest of Paris, where we had faced diminishing German infantry resistance and sporadic artillery fire, to the northeast of the city where the Germans were building a strong defense. In fact, some of the units of the 28th entered combat later that same afternoon. The event was reported as possibly the only instance in history of troops marching in a parade through the capital of a great country to participate in a pitched battle the same day.

For us, the Paris parade wound up among some tanks of Gen. Leclerc's French Armored Division, at a neglected airport. At once, a small, middle-aged French civilian in a baggy tweed suit hobbled up to me. He pointed down a weed-bordered airstrip. "Lin-dee, Lin-dee!" He followed up with a stream of French and began shaking hands with everyone in our depleted rifle company, down to about 90 men. Every one of us brightened up. Some GIs hugged and patted the Frenchman on the back. Without understanding his language, we all realized that we were about to bivouac on le Bourget Airport, scene of another Parisian celebration for the U.S. 17 years before.

The Paris Parade of 1944. Created for its positive effect on the French people, it certainly succeeded in that. But, in addition, their enthusiastic reaction to us gave a great uplift to our morale. We needed that boost after the rough weeks we had endured and for even rougher months ahead.

Captain Harry's Centennial

As the 85th National Convention approaches, memories of many VFW members turn to thoughts of similar gatherings held over the years.

Some older members, those of the World War I era, may remember the Convention, then called Encampment, in Kansas City, Mo., in 1931.

Others may recall the 1949 Encampment in Miami when the VFW observed its 50th anniversary.

Why single out those two for special recollection?

Well, the 1931 National Convention was chaired by Harry S Truman, who became the 33rd President in 1945, and the 1949 Encampment had him as its principal speaker. (Truman eschewed a period after the "S." He claimed the single letter was his middle name. According to the story, one of his grandfathers was named Solomon and the other Shipp. Rather than offend either one, his parents named him Harry S for both.)

Memories of these two events were stirred by the 100th anniversary last May 8 of former President Truman's birth that began the Truman Centennial.

When he appeared at the Miami Convention, the North Atlantic Treaty was only a few months old, and what Walter Lippmann dubbed the "cold war" was going on in earnest. It would heat up less than a year after Truman's speech with the outbreak of the Korean War. World War II had been over for four years.

Truman's words, read 35 years later, show how little world problems have changed and could be uttered virtually unaltered by every President since.

"All the countries that signed the treaty have learned how weakness invites aggression — how democratic countries, unless they stand together, can be taken over by one," he declared.

In 1952 at the Washington Conference, President Truman holds up Life Member number 1000, with which he was presented.

Sound familiar?

Reviewing the Communist threat and Communism's claims to provide better lives for the world's peoples, he said the "free nations of the world offer a different answer to the demand of mankind for security and liberty."

"Our answer is based on voluntary association among free nations, mutual adjustment of our common problems and combined economic effort," he continued.

He also reminded delegates of the role the U.S. played in helping war-ravaged nations get back on their feet since the end of the war.

"The people of the United States have done more in the cause of world peace and world recovery than any other nation has ever been called upon to do."

But, he continued, the United States' purpose in arming itself and its allies is not "to start a fight with anybody. We are building defenses so that we won't have to fight."

United Nations failure to establish "bulwarks against aggression" he blamed on the Soviet Union, which "has blocked every effort to establish an effective international police force and to free the world from the fear of aggression."

Prophetically, he said "two young republics — the Philippines and Korea — need military assistance if they are to maintain their national security." Military aid to Greece and Turkey would continue, and Iran needed help to ward off Soviet influence, he said.

When the future President chaired the Kansas City Convention committee, he was presiding judge of the Jackson County Court, a governmental not judicial body, as he pointed out.

His principal public function was to open the Convention and introduce civic and political leaders who welcomed delegates to the city and state. The first was Col. Ruby D. Garrett of the Chamber of Commerce, followed by Mayor Bryce B. Smith, Mayor Roger T. Sermon of Independence and finally, Gov. Henry S. Caufield.

Introducing Sermon, Truman noted Independence was his home and "a suburb of Kansas City and the county seat." Both served in the 35th Division's 129th Field Artillery during World War I. Sermon commanded Battery C, Truman Battery D on the Western Front.

When it came time to introduce Commander-in-Chief Paul Wolman, Truman pointed out that year's membership gain, despite the Depression, was 50,000 and 360 new Posts had been added.

Past Commander-in-Chief James E. Van Zandt recalled last year that Truman was a candidate for Commander-in-Chief at the 1931 Convention. That was the year Van Zandt was elected Junior Vice Commander-in-Chief after serving as Chief of Staff.

Those two occasions were not the only ones Truman participated in after he rose to national prominence.

He was presented with Life Member card number 1000 at the 1952 Washington Conference. After he retired as President to his Independence home, he was present at at least one Department Senior Vice Commanders' Conference. Frequently, Commanders-in-Chief visited him during trips to Kansas City.

As an Army Reserve colonel in the 1930s, Truman often held Reserve Officer Association meetings in the VFW Building in Kansas City.

Truman's loyalty to the World War I veterans he commanded was legendary. He often attended their reunions and kept up a steady correspondence with survivors. One was Eddie Jacobson, a Kansas City clothier and ardent Zionist. It is said that Jacobson's influence went far toward Truman's support for the establishment of Israel.

Another Battery D survivor recalled in Foreign Service, the earlier name of VFW Magazine, several years ago:

"Truman may be Mr. President of United States of America to millions the world, but to his old cannoneers and skimmers, he still is and always will be 'Captain Harry.'"

Truman sought active duty with Army after Pearl Harbor, but Gen. George C. Marshall suggested he remain in the Senate. "Too old," he told him.

He did stay and became an important figure on the national scene as chairman of the committee that examined war contracts and suppliers' performance. His work, it is said, saved taxpayers $15 billion.

Reaching the Senate for the first term was not difficult, for Truman had the backing of the powerful Democratic Pendergast machine. When it came time for him to run for reelection, however, President Roosevelt favored Truman's primary opponent, former Missouri governor, Lloyd C. Stark. So Truman campaigned more vigorously throughout the state and won.

Unquestionably, Truman's military experience and continuous study of his favorite subject, history, held him in good stead in discussions with top military officers as well as his wartime watchdog role.

Roosevelt chose him in 1944 as his fourth-term running mate to satisfy objections to Henry A. Wallace as too liberal. Then Roosevelt died on April 12, 1945, and Truman was catapulted into the White House. Truman was the first of six other Presidents since Harry S. Truman waves to the delegates at the 50th National Convention in Miami. He was the principal speaker.

Theodore Roosevelt to have had any military experience.

His accomplishments as President were numerous. A million American lives were saved when he ordered the atom bomb dropped on Hiroshima and hastened Japan's surrender. He learned quickly the difficulties of negotiating with the Russians when he attempted it at the Potsdam Conference after the war in Europe. He moved quickly to force the withdrawal of Russian troops from Iran in 1947, and through the Truman Doctrine saved Greece from the Communists and strengthened Turkey. The Marshall Plan was adopted to rebuild Western Europe. The Russians, who refused to join in, inaugurated the Molotov Plan that exploited prostrate Eastern Europe. The Berlin Airlift saved that city from collapsing under the Russian blockade. NATO has been credited with keeping the peace in Western Europe since its inception in 1949. Defending Korea demonstrated that the U.S. would live up to its commitments to defend freedom.

When the former President died in December 1972, then VFW Commander-in-Chief Patrick E. Carr commented:

"He was often called a common man, but I believe that Harry Truman will go down in history as the most uncommon man of our time. He will live forever in the hearts of the people of the world. . . He was a humble man, but in that humility lay his strength."

The Nisei: American Soldier

by Vincent T. Tajiri

It was Saturday, Nov. 11, 1944. Some still thought of it as Armistice Day. In this Vosges mountain rest area, in a valley that ran from St. Die to Geradmer, with the enemy's artillery finding the range, the word "armistice" had an ironic ring to it.

It was raining as it had been since early September—cold and incessant. In this sea of blackened mud the newest of the invaders stood in a tattered formation. The short, stocky men with heavy, olive drab winter coats and steel helmets had nothing in their eyes but weariness.

Maj. Gen. John E. Dahlquist, commander of the 36th Infantry Division, of the Texas National Guard, had asked that these men be assembled so he could congratulate them personally, for the valor they displayed during the past month when they had joined and spearheaded his division. Only two weeks earlier, after other units of the 141st Infantry had been beaten back in attempts to rescue their 1st Battalion surrounded by the Germans, he had called upon the troops of the 442nd Regimental Combat Team. They accomplished in five days of bitter fighting what seemed impossible.

When he saw not more than 800 men standing at attention in the rest area, where there should have been 4,500, Gen. Dahlquist turned to Col. Charles W. Pence, commander of the 442nd. "Colonel," he asked, "where are the rest of your men?"

Pence looked again at his troops before answering. Obviously, the 3rd Battalion had suffered the most. I Co. was represented by only eight men—four riflemen and a light machine gun section. K Co. had 17 riflemen plus the remnants of a weapons platoon and was now commanded by a young buck sergeant. Emotion tore at his voice as he replied, "Sir...these are all that are left."

At that moment he might have been reminded of King Pyrrhus after his troops had suffered enormous losses in defeating the Romans at Asculum. "Another such victory," Pyrrhus said, "and I am lost."

Of all the 442nd's victories since it joined the 36th Division at Epinal, the costliest had been the rescue of the 1st Battalion, 141st Infantry, the "Lost Battalion."

The key battle had taken place on the fourth day of the rescue attempt. The 442nd Infantry's 3rd Battalion, moving along the center of the attack with the 100th Battalion, of the 442nd, on the right and the 2nd Battalion at the far left, reached the narrow heavily-wooded ridge where the "Lost Battalion" was trapped. The Germans had dug in their defenses all around the "Lost Battalion." Artillery, heavy weapons and machine guns were aimed down that narrow wooded ridge.

Supported by tanks, I and K Cos. managed to inch forward until the tanks were immobilized by enemy fire. The men were pinned down, caught in the cross fire of machine guns and treebursts from artillery and mortar shells that sent shrapnel raining in on them. The 3rd Battalion's men could neither advance nor pull back. "Fix bayonets," was the order. Men rose from their sheltered positions. Firing from the hip, they moved relentlessly forward. Some darted from one tree to another. As men fell, others stepped over them and moved on. The Germans fired their every weapon at the advancing men. It lasted a full half hour. To some it seemed like forever. Then the Germans, fresh troops of the 198th Fusilier Battalion and the 338th Infantry Division, broke and ran. The German defenses had been shattered.

At 2 p.m. the following day, the lead patrol of I Co. made contact with the "Lost Battalion." Two hours later, the position had been secured and relief had come to the 1st Battalion, 141st Infantry. Altogether, 275 men had been rescued. The cost to the 442nd was roughly 800 men: 600 wounded, 200 killed. It was the kind of victory King Pyrrhus would have understood.

Since World War II took place some 40 years ago, it is not surprising that so many Americans, including fellow veterans, know so little about the 442nd RCT and what made this unit so unusual in U.S. history.

The combat team was composed of the 442nd Infantry Regiment, incorporating the 100th Infantry Battalion as its 1st Battalion, the 522nd Field Artillery and the 232nd Combat Team, totaling approximately 4,500. Its abnormally high 300% casualty rate is shown by the fact that eventually 18,000 men served within the combat team.

During its brief 2 1/2 years, the 442nd became the "most decorated unit of its size and length of service in the history of the United States." Its members were awarded 18,143 individual decorations for valor—everything from one Medal of Honor, posthumously to PFC. Sadao S. Munemori, to some 4,000 Bronze Stars with 1,200 Oak Leaf Clusters. The 18 decorations from allied nations included the French Croix de Guerre and the Italian Croce al Merito di Guerra.

But, being "the most decorated" was only another claim to uniqueness. What made the 442nd Combat Team truly unique was that, with the exception of several of its officers, it was an all-Nisei fighting outfit. Nisei means a "second-generation citizen born of immigrant Japanese parents."

The 442nd Regimental Combat Team accounted for 18,000 Japanese-Americans, but another 9,000 Japanese-Americans were scattered throughout other units of the U.S. Army including the Air Corps. The U.S. Army's best-kept secret was that 6,000 Japanese-Americans served in the Military Intelligence Service against the Japanese enemy in the Pacific.

The MIS was in the Aleutians. Its members marched in Guadalcanal, contracted malaria in Tarawa and died in the jungles and the caves of New Georgia, Iwo Jima, Peleliu and in all those other places that were coveted pieces of real estate. When Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur waded back onto

This army painting depicts the rescue of a 36th Division battalion, surrounded by Germans, by the all—Japanese—American 442nd Regimental Combat Team the shores of Leyte, the MIS was by his side.

In the Solomons, Nisei intercepted the radio message that led to the successful ambush of Adm. Isoroku Yamamoto, Commander-in-Chief of the Japanese Navy. MacArthur called this one of the most singularly significant events of the Pacific war.

In 1944, the MIS captured and translated the Japanese Navy's Z-Plan, the defense strategy for the Marianas—Guam, Saipan and Tinian. When the invasion took place, this knowledge made it possible for Adm. Raymond Spruance's fleet to wipe out the Japanese counterattack. The Japanese carriers never again appeared in battle.

These were men whose lives faced double jeopardy. In infiltrating the enemy's lines, they became victims to death from both sides. Their achievements can be measured by the statements of the men under whom they served so gallantly. General MacArthur, in praising them, said, "Never in military history did any army know so much about the enemy prior to actual engagement."

In Burma, Maj. Gen. Frank D. Merrill was less poetic, "As for the value of the Nisei, I couldn't have gotten along without them." Maj. Gen. Charles Willoughby, MacArthur's intelligence chief, put it like this: "The Nisei, saved a million lives and shortened the war by two years."

What was most remarkable about all of the Nisei who fought and died during World War II was that their parents, unlike other immigrants, had been singled out by discriminatory laws that kept them from owning agricultural land and from ever becoming U.S. citizens—until the law was changed in 1952. The 1924 immigration law barred other Japanese from entering the U.S. at all.

The greatest blow dealt them occurred in May, 1942, when more than 110,000 of them—64% American-born, U.S. citizens—were taken from their homes and businesses at a huge financial loss and placed in hastily-constructed camps in the American interior. Barbed-wire fences patrolled by U.S. soldiers enclosed them. This "relocation" was ended by a U.S. Supreme Court decision in 1944 that ruled it unconstitutional.

None of these people were guilty of any crime against this nation. They were relocated because they were of Japanese ancestry and lived within the Western Defense Command consisting of three Pacific Coast states and portions of adjoining states. The statement by its commander, Lt. Gen. John L. DeWitt, "A Jap is a Jap", and the fact that neither Germans nor Italians (citizen or alien) on either coast were treated similarly point to the racially and politically motivated character of the "relocation." In Hawaii, where persons of Japanese ancestry constituted a third of the population, no evacuation took place. Wasn't Hawaii, which the Japanese navy attacked so easily, as vulnerable to invasion as the Pacific Coast states?

Dear Cooper:

I have been directed by the leadership and the member organizations of the National Vietnam Veterans Coalition to write you this letter of appreciation.

The men wanted me to let you know of their gratitude for the VFW's strong efforts in reference to the recent passage of S1651.

While we realize that many veterans organizations contributed to this just victory, we are keenly aware that your organization was the first to endorse Agent Orange Compensation Legislation and was by far the most supportive of such legislation. Your Organization's strongest lobbying effort did, indeed, make the difference in bringing this vital legislation into reality.

Thus, the Coalition and its member organizations, wishes to extend its deep and sincere thanks to the VFW. The leadership has informed me that they will do all in their power to insure that all Vietnam Veterans do realize that the VFW was their best supporter on this and other issues effecting Vietnam Veterans. Once again, we commend your actions on their behalf.

With best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

National Home Questions, Answers

Q. What are the programs at the Community Center?

A. This building is the focal point for our entire recreation program. There is a well-rounded variety offered throughout the year, with variations depending upon the season. The swimming pool is in constant use during the summer. Programs such as floor hockey, basketball, volleyball, indoor soccer and general recreation take place in the gym. Art programs, woodshop, and general recreation also take place in the basement. Occasional programs are held for staff and adult residents. The Community Center also coordinates trips and outings. Whether it is scouting, weightlifting, or playing a game of Ping Pong, the Community Center is alive with activities for all ages.

Q. Are there organized sports? Do they play other homes for children?

A. There is a regular involvement with local team sports. Our youngsters play on teams sponsored by the Home. The team may be made up exclusively of Home youngsters or it may involve a mix of community and Home children. We sponsor teams in floor hockey, basketball, volleyball, softball, baseball and soccer. Depending on the sport, games are played against other children's homes, smaller private schools or other community teams. In many cases, our uniforms have been donated by the Military Order of the Cootie, through its recreational support program.

Q. What happens to the natural parents when the children are grown?

A. The National Home and its resources are available to assist single parents in the difficult task of raising their children alone. If they remain here until their children graduate from high school, they will then be faced with a decision concerning their own future. They are assisted in looking ahead to this day by our counseling staff. When the last child has graduated from high school, it will be necessary for the parent to be prepared to leave the Home. In some cases, these parents move back to their homes of record. Others settle in the Eaton Rapids area.

VFW Takes Part In D-Day Rites

When the 40th anniversary of the landings in Normandy was commemorated, the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States was there, represented by Adjutant Gen. Howard E. Vander Clute, Jr.

A highlight of the VFW's participation was Vander Clute's presentation of VFW Medals of Commendation to the Omaha Beach towns of St. Laurent-sur-Mer, Colleville-sur-Mer and Verville-sur-Mer on behalf of Commander-in-Chief Clifford G. Olson, Jr. The mayors accepted the awards for their towns.

The awards were made in recognition of their cooperation in preserving the Omaha Beach area and cooperation with American authorities in caring for the American Cemetery and Memorial overlooking Omaha Beach and where nearly 10,000 Americans killed in the Normandy and Northern France Campaigns are buried. The three towns are a short distance south of the beach, and their capture played a pivotal role in the initial success of the invasion 40 years ago.

During the commemoration, a street in St. Laurent-sur-Mer was renamed in honor of the 2nd Inf. Div., which landed on Omaha Beach on D-Day plus 1.

Looking on during the presentation of the medals to mayors were some 1500 persons, including Raymond Triboulet, a former French cabinet minister and chairman of the commemoration committee; units of the French Army; the U.S. 1st Division, which landed on D-Day; the U.S. Army band from Heidelberg, Germany; Gen. Glenn K. Otis, U.S. Army Commander in Europe.

Vander Clute also participated in

An agreement transferring to the United States from France the land on which the D-Day monument on Utah Beach was erected and dedicated on the 40th anniversary of Normandy invasion is signed by U.S. Ambassador to France Evan G. the ceremonies on Utah Beach, where the American Battle Monuments Commission erected an obelisk-type monument to VII Corps troops who landed there. Among others taking part were Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh, U.S. Ambassador to France Evan G. Galbraith and representatives of the U.S. Army in Europe.

Accompanying him on his visit to the beaches were Quartermaster Elmer L. Matheke of the Department of Germany and Commander Robert L. Whitbread of Post 605 in Paris, who worked closely with the French and American authorities in preparing for VFW participation in the anniversary observance.

Prior to the official observance on Omaha Beach at which President Ronald Reagan and French President Francois Mitterand spoke, Vander Clute took part in a reception for dignitaries that included 17 members of the House of Representatives; Sens. Strom Thurmond, an ex-paratrooper, Lowell Weicker and John Warner; Gen. Bernard Rogers, Supreme Allied Commander in Europe; Secretary of State George P. Shultz, VA Administrator Harry N. Walters and several others.

To acquaint himself with European defense problems, Vander Clute traveled to the Netherlands where he met with Prosper Ego, president of the Legion of Ex-Servicemen of the Netherlands, who testified before the Dutch Parliament's Defense Committee strongly in favor of missile deployment now as the Dutch agreed in 1979.

In Weiden, Germany, Vander Clute was briefed by U.S. armored cavalry officers patrolling the German-Czechoslovak border and then went to the crossing point at Waidhaus, where Czechoslovak border guards became alarmed at their presence and watched their movements closely. This is also where the natural gas pipeline from the Soviet Union is under construction. Besides the understrength U.S. armored cavalry unit, German border police, customs units and Bavarian border police also patrol the border.

Vander Clute also visited two VFW Posts in the area and attended the German Department convention in Bamberg. Briefings on the Soviet reaction to the missile buildup, theater nuclear weapons deployment, politics and logistics in Europe were provided him at 7th Army Headquarters in Heidelberg.

Additional VA Burial Benefits

In addition to the Veterans Administration burial benefits listed in the April issue, several others are available to veterans who were discharged under conditions other than dishonorable.

These are detailed in the current VA booklet, "Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents."

Veterans of the Spanish-American War, Mexican Border Period, World War I, World War II, Korean Conflict Period, Vietnam Era and Certain Peacetime Service are eligible for burial Flags if they served during wartime, or after Jan. 31, 1955, or at least one enlistment during peacetime "unless discharged or released sooner for disability incurred in line of duty."

"VA may also issue a Flag for a veteran who is missing in action and is later presumed dead," the booklet says. The Flag is "to drape the casket of veteran" and then it may be given to the next-of-kin, close friend or associate of the deceased veteran.

Burial in VA national cemeteries is available to veterans of wartime or peacetime service "other than for training." The booklet notes also that reservists and Army and Air National Guardsmen who died on active duty or on active duty for training also may be eligible.

Burial also is available to an eligible veteran's wife, husband, widow or widower, minor children and in some cases unmarried adult children.

Headstones and markers are provided for the gravesites of those buried in national cemeteries.

Burial in Arlington National Cemetery, which is under Army jurisdiction, is limited to certain categories of military personnel and veterans except in the case of cremated remains to be placed in the columbarium.

Veterans buried in private cemeteries are eligible for headstones and markers if they meet the eligibility requirements for burial in a national cemetery. No charge is made, but the cost of placing the marker in a private cemetery must be borne by the applicant. This benefit does not apply to the veteran's family buried in a private cemetery, but it does in the case of family members buried in a state-owned cemetery.

The VA may pay an amount not to exceed the actual cost of a government headstone or marker as a partial reimbursement for the person acquiring one to be placed in a cemetery other than a national cemetery. The cost varies from year to year. Effective last Oct. 1, it was $68.

Presidential Memorial Certificates expressing the nation's gratitude for the veteran's and signed by the President are provided next-of-kin.

A memorial headstone or marker may be furnished on application by next-of-kin to commemorate an eligible veteran, including one who died on active service, whose remains have not been recovered, were buried at sea, donated to science or cremated and the ashes scattered.

AFEM Awarded For Lebanon Service

The Joint Chiefs of Staff have approved the award of the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal (AFEM) for Lebanon, with June 1, 1983, as the opening date for the operation and the closing date to be determined later.

Commander-in-Chief Clifford G. Olson, Jr., has repeatedly urged this action be taken.

The area of operations includes Lebanon, adjacent waters and the air-space above and adjacent to it. To qualify for the AFEM, military personnel must have served at least 30 consecutive days or 60 nonconsecutive days in the area of operations.

Direct support of the Lebanon operation for 30 consecutive or 60 nonconsecutive days also may qualify for the AFEM if the direct support actually involved entering the area of operations.

Also qualifying for the AFEM are those who engaged in combat or duty which is equally as hazardous as combat during the operation with armed opposition, regardless of time in the area.

Regularly assigned crewmembers of aircraft who flew into, out of, within or over the area to support the operation also may qualify. Armed forces personnel who receive the AFEM for Lebanon meet the overseas and campaign medal requisites for membership in the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

VFW Aids Victims Of Tornadoes in North Carolina

The VFW proved once again its willingness to assist victims of natural disasters when it aided the victims of the spring tornadoes that devastated parts of North Carolina.

Department of North Carolina Adjutant Quartermaster Cleve Cox contacted Adjutant Gen. Howard E.

Vander Clute, Jr., at VFW National Headquarters in Kansas City for assistance, shortly after the tornados struck eastern North Carolina and caused millions of dollars in damage.

Many of those affected were VFW members, and Vander Clute agreed that National Headquarters would match funds raised by the Department up to $20,000.

The same day Cox talked to Vander Clute, an appeal was made to Posts and Auxiliaries for donations to needy veterans and their families. In a short time $6,000 had been received from individual members, Posts and Auxiliaries throughout the Department with an equal amount to come from National Headquarters.

Department Commander Jack Ragan and Cox dispensed $2,500 in stricken Pitt County immediately, with $2,000 given in Maxton and Red Springs. Other areas were covered the week of April 9. They included Cumberland, Sampson and Wayne Counties.

Wars of the United States are instructed to immediately ask the Congress of the United States to amend Section 5 of the Congressional Charter of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States to conform with our Constitution and By-Law changes.

The annual meeting of the corporation will be held at 9 a.m. at the VFW National Home in Eaton Rapids, Mich. on Oct. 27, in accordance with the By-laws to elect two trustees, one from the 5th District of the National Home (Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia and Alabama) and one from the 8th District of the National Home (Illinois and Indiana). Mail ballots for the election must be received at the National Home no later than 10 a.m., October 17 per "Article I, Section 4, Voting."

POW/MIA Unit Judges VA Work

Although the VA's Advisory Committee on Former Prisoners found health care provided this group of veterans has been "uniformly excellent and without complaint," the "adjudication process still requires attention."

This was one of the conclusions brought forth by the committee at its meeting in Washington March 7 and 8. Chairman is retired Air Force Lt. Gen. John P. Flynn, who also chairs the VFW POW/MIA Subcommittee.

Reports from the field, the committee said, indicate that VA field stations "are still not complying with the spirit and intent of PL 97-37" and that "the information, education and indoctrination contained in the directives have not reached the 'worker' level at the field stations."

From December to March, the committee reported, the "hot line" has handled 3,000 calls, 75% of which have dealt with problems that were resolved during the call.

Congress has added another presumptive disease to the list of those included, the committee reported. It is dysthymic disorders, a feeling of depression and anxiety. The committee plans to ask Congress to add to the list of presumptions.

After hearing reports from representatives of the VA Department of Medicine and Surgery and Veterans Benefits, it was recommended that a compliance inspection system be initiated to insure that field stations are complying with directives relating to PL 97-37. The committee commended the two VA departments for their effort to comply with the law.

Discussing pending Congressional action to proclaim July 20 as National POW/MIA Recognition Day, Flynn urged former prisoners to take part in programs planned in their communities for the occasion.

Ohio Seeking Vietnam Veterans for AO Study

The Department of Ohio is seeking veterans who served in Vietnam to help in a survey of birth defects in children conceived after their father or mother returned home after exposure to Agent Orange in Southeast Asia.

Anyone contacting the Department is asked to include the child's birthdate, whether other children were born without birth defects and their birthdates, tour of duty years, location in Southeast Asia, branch of service, name used during service and names and addresses of comrades for possible future reference.

Replies may be sent to Mrs. Mary Ann Barker at the Veterans of Foreign Wars Building, 4100 East Main Street, Whitehall, Ohio 43213. Her husband is the Department Service Officer.

Navy Reserves Get New Role

If the U.S. goes to war, the job of fighting the Cuban Navy in the Caribbean will be given to the Navy Reserves, Rep. Ike Skelton (Mo.), a member of the House Armed Services Committee, revealed.

This is but one of the new missions the Navy will assign its reserve forces, he added.

Operating from Key West and other naval facilities around the Gulf Coast, reserve units will have the responsibility for maintaining the Caribbean sea lines of communication.

"The Navy has taken to heart the importance that we on the Armed Services Committee have of using our reserve forces more effectively," he continued. "In just the past year the Navy has identified a number of new missions which the reserves will assume." In addition to the Caribbean role, the Naval Reserve will acquire the eight new mine counter-measure ships to fulfill its new requirement of maritime coastal defense.

The impetus behind greater utilization of the reserves is to save the taxpayers' money. With close to $200 billion in budget deficits facing the country and Congress, the Armed Services Committee has put pressure on all four services to use their reserves more efficiently.

Traditionally, the reserves have not been regarded by active duty counterparts as important parts of the armed forces. This attitude began to change with the switch to the All-Volunteer Forces in the early 1970s. Operating costs can be saved by using the reserves is the theory behind their greater utilization.

Among the four services, the Navy has shown the least enthusiasm for expanding the role of its reserves, but this attitude seems to have changed over the past year.

Rear Adm. Bruce Newell, director of a new report to Congress on the subject, said "Skelton's enthusiasm and interest in this specific issue" provided the Congressional interest such efforts require. He noted that Skelton visited Naval Reserve units in San Diego and New Orleans as part of his effort to become better acquainted with the mission and roles of the Naval Reserve. He also acknowledged that, as a result of Skelton's suggestion, the Navy recently received a briefing from the Air Force - the leader among the four services in using the reserves.

War's trauma and its long-term effect on the lives of the men who fought it is not something you take lightly, declares Vietnam veteran Chris Hayden, who now makes his home in the small western Colorado town of Montrose and embarked on a trans-continental run to focus attention on the veterans and their problems.

He says many of the men who served in Vietnam are still wrestling with an inner turmoil they brought home with them after the war in Southeast Asia ended and as yet have been unable to lay to rest.

Hayden, 37, who served as a 1st Marine Air Wing door gunner, flying out of Danang from 1965 to 1967 and out of Marble Mountain, Vietnam, in 1969 and 1970, numbers himself among the many veterans of that war still struggling to put their lives together.

Originally from Wheeling, W. Va., he was raised in Cadiz, Ohio, where he graduated from high school in 1964 before enlisting in the U.S. Marine Corps that same year.

While in Vietnam, Hayden, with other members of the helicopter crews he served with, was shot down three times and was awarded the Bronze Star and Purple Heart. By the time he was discharged in August, 1970, he was a sergeant.

"The Vietnam War left me and others like me with a sense of guilt, failure and frustration that have been magnified and driven inward rather than dissipated since we returned home," he says.

Hayden emphasizes that the Vietnam War, like any other war, is not without its heroes. "But because of the public sentiment in this country that surrounds this war, they are unsung heroes," he adds.

To underscore his point, Hayden cites the high unemployment rate of more than over 20% among Vietnam veterans and the fact that so many

On the Road To Victory

Vietnam veterans have been unable to find steady employment since their return home.

After his discharge from the U.S. Marine Corps in 1970, Hayden returned home and went to work for Ohio Coal, the same mining company for which his father worked.

Coal mining is hard and dirty and the days are long, but, for Hayden, the nights and the days he spent away from the mines were even harder.

He couldn't seem to put the war behind him. "I kept having flashbacks to things that happened while I was in Southeast Asia. I kept asking myself why...and there didn't seem to be any answers."

"After a while, I turned to alcohol and drugs to try to escape and once even attempted to take my own life," he recalls.

In Hayden's case, though, reaching rock-bottom was the "rude awakening that I needed." After that, he began picking up the pieces and working to turn his life around.

"The real turning point for me, though, was the day I met my wife Jill," Hayden says. "The love and understanding without measure that Jill has given me is the driving force that has enabled me to rebuild my life and my dreams. She helped me to refind my music and encouraged me to begin writing my book. I don't know where I would be today without her."

They met at the country music "Jam-boree in the Hills" at Brush Park in St. Clairsville, Ohio, in 1979. It was love at first sight, "or at least second sight," Jill points out, adding that they didn't really "discover" each other until their second meeting when he gave her a birthday kiss "that went on forever" and their relationship blossomed into love.

The Haydens were married in October of that same year in what Jill describes as "the cutest little country church in Cadiz." "We've been best friends and lovers ever since," she adds.

Following the formal exchange of vows, the couple packed their bags, pulled up their roots and moved to Colorado where they hoped to find a fresh start together.

Their first home in Colorado was in the isolated mountain community of Twin Lakes above Leadville. They lived there for only seven months before they packed up and moved to Tucson, Ariz., still following their dreams.

Four months later, those same dreams took them to Montrose where they have lived ever since. "We loved Montrose the minute we saw it and now it's become our hometown," Jill says.

Hayden said before leaving on his cross-continental run that the hardest part of the trip would be the long separation from Jill, but noted that "too many veterans suffering from the lingering trauma of war are without someone like Jill to help them rebuild their dreams."

Hayden cites the high suicide rate among Vietnam veterans as visible evidence that, although the war in Southeast Asia is physically in the past for most Americans, the "inner, private war" of those still struggling to deal with suppressed emotions stemming from the "Vietnam experience" is ongoing.

"When the suicide rate among veterans after the war claims almost as great a number of lives as those actually killed in battle during the conflict, something is wrong and something ought to be done about it," he says.

He contends that the fact that the Vietnam veterans had to pay for their own monument in Washington, D.C., indicates the general overall indifference of the American public toward anything connected with the war in Southeast Asia.

"I want to make a public appeal to the American people and especially to those companies who benefited financially from the Vietnam War to hire veterans and to help them become winners in their quest for the American dream."

"Because of the feelings of failure that Vietnam veterans returned home with and the reception they received at that time of homecoming, it is very difficult for many of them to find success and to rebuild their dreams," he said.

"I've got something to say and it seems as if sometimes you have to do something off the wall like this to get people to listen to you," he adds.

The "VFW/Chris Hayden Run for Life" officially got underway at Norton Air Force Base in San Bernardino, Calif., on Sunday, March 11, sponsored by the Coors Brewing Co. and endorsed by the national organization of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. At Norton AFB, Hayden and the driver of his support van, Don Pierce, of Montrose, were special guests at a banquet for families who still have servicemen listed as missing in action from the Vietnam War.

Hayden's "Run for Life" concluded July 1 at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, followed by a reception at the VFW Memorial Building. At the ceremonies at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, Ron Duchin, VFW Washington Office Public Affairs Director, presented Hayden with a VFW award on behalf of Commander-in-Chief Clifford G. Olson, Jr. Other participants included Ann Millis Griffiths, of the National League of Families; Paul Bannai, VA director of memorial affairs; Donald Chasteen, of the Department of Labor; Douglas Riggs, presidential special assistant; and Warren Hutchings, of Coors. A joint service color guard opened the program and a Marine Corps bugler played "Taps" to conclude it.

Before leaving Montrose, Hayden was given a hero's send-off in the Centennial Plaza outside the City Hall. Although this was a happy event for him, shared by his wife and friends, it held a bitter irony for him, too.

He couldn't help but reflect on the kind of reception that the majority of the men who served their country in Vietnam got when they returned to the U.S. after the war. In his heart, he knew this send-off was kin to the kind of homecoming every veteran looks forward to, but few ever got, especially the veterans of the Vietnam War.

Before His Death, Sam Tashjy Honored

Sam Tashjy may be gone, but it is unlikely the thousands of veterans he helped as Maryland Department Service Officer will ever forget him.

Shortly before Tashjy's death last spring Commander-in-Chief Clifford G. Olson, Jr., wrote him his approval of the award of the VFW Distinguished Service Medal, the organization's highest:

"I am writing to extend my deep and heartfelt thanks for the untold contributions and countless hours you have given in providing service to veterans and their families. I know of no other comrade who is more worthy of the VFW Distinguished Service Medal."

The award was presented by Fred Von Rembow, Assistant Director of the VFW National Veterans Service.

Von Rembow made the presentation on behalf of Olson at the Department of Maryland Council of Administration meeting after it was called to order by Department Commander Edward W. Fowler, Jr.

After the ceremonies, Tashjy went to the Fort Howard VA Medical Center and died some weeks afterward of cancer.

The citation:

"In sincere appreciation and grateful recognition of his deep commitment and selfless devotion in providing service to veterans and their survivors as State Service Officer of the Department of Maryland and for his long and active participation in civic, fraternal and veteran humanitarian programs in the city of Baltimore and the state of Maryland. His commitment of more than 15,000 hours in the VAVS program at Fort Howard VA Medical Center reflects voluntarism at its best and evidences his dedication to the purposes of the Veterans of Foreign Wars."

Before his death, Sam Tashjy, Maryland Department Service Officer, right, received the VFW Distinguished Service Medal, from Fred Von Rembow, Assistant Director of the National Veterans Service, left.

One of Tashjy's last successes as Department Service Officer was the reversal last September by the VA of an earlier decision against a Vietnam veteran who committed suicide.

Tashjy convinced the appeal board that the veteran's death was directly related to his service in Vietnam. The award was a 100% disability, monthly awards to his survivors—a widow and two sons—and vocational training for the widow and college tuition for the boys.

"Sam was the first person who understood," said the veteran's widow. "He brought back my faith in humanity, in my government. I really feel that if Ron had met Sam before everything happened, he'd be alive today."

But helping people had long been a way of life for Sam Tashjy, one he inherited from his Assyrian forebears. Once he told an interviewer, "My grandmother used to say that if a day passes without helping someone in need, then you have lost a day."

Seventy-three when he died, he enlisted in the Army in 1929, served in World War II as an infantryman in the Aleutians, rejoined for the Korean War—organized an orphanage in Korea—and retired from the Army in 1970 as a chief warrant officer. A funeral mass was offered for him at Our Lady of Hope Church and his burial was in Arlington National Cemetery. A VFW Life Member, and Cootie, of which he was Past State Commander, he had been Maryland Service Officer for the past five years. He also was a member of the Disabled American Veterans, Catholic War Veterans, Jewish War Veterans and other veterans' groups.

He had received many honors. Among them was appointment to President Ford's Advisory Council for Veterans' Affairs. He was co-organizer of the original March of Dimes Walk-A-Thon, past president of the Dundalk Veterans' Association. Outstanding Veteran of the Year and member of the Maryland State Senior Hall of Fame. He also was vice president of the Baltimore County Police Memorial Committee, a member of the advisory board of the American Security Council and belonged to the Vietnam Veterans Civic Council. He was honored by the VA as a volunteer and for his services to hospitalized veterans and to all veterans as VFW State Service Officer.

RECENT BOOKS

Hardbound

Sharpe's Enemy by Bernard Cornwell, Viking Press, $16.95, 351 pages. The fifth in a series of adventure stories about the Napoleonic wars, Sharpe's Enemy centers around a tiny village in Spain where a brigade of deserters from the French and British armies hold the townspeople hostage.

Edwina: Countess Mountbatten of Burma by Richard Hough, Morrow, $15.95, 239 pages. A biography of Edwina Ashley, who became Lady Mountbatten and lead an extraordinary life, from poor little rich girl to a crusader for the innocent victims of war's ravages.

Caveat: Realism, Reagan and Foreign Policy by Alexander M. Haig, Jr., Macmillan, $17.95, 367 pages. Haig recounts the machination's of the President's men in foreign affairs during his 18-month tenure as Secretary of State.

Monte Cassino by David Hapgood and David Richardson, Congdon and Weed, $17.95, 269 pages. Based on diaries and newly-opened records, this work deals with the controversial bombing of the 400-year-old Benedictine Abbey on Feb. 15, 1944.

Omaha Beachhead, Utah Beach to Cherbourg and St. Lo Battery Press, $26.50 each, 212, 213 & 128 pages respectively. These three reprints of the original work done by the ETO Staff detail the material indicated in their titles and dovetail neatly with the 40th anniversary of the events.

Long Time Passing: Vietnam & the Haunted Generation by Myra MacPherson, Doubleday, 662 pages, $19.95. In years to come, this volume may well be regarded as the definitive work on the aftermath of the Vietnam Era. Miss MacPherson interviewed hundreds of Vietnam veterans, deserters, anti-war activists, draft dodgers, the wounded, parents and counsellors to produce her work. Virtually no aspect of the Vietnam War is neglected. She reserves special criticism — one of her few deviations from her rigorous objectivity — for those now in public life who evaded the draft during Vietnam and believe now that it is necessary. She provides those not directly involved in the Vietnam War with many insights that will help them understand the Vietnam veteran.

Need Arms Buildup

We must continue to build our defenses with the most effective nuclear and conventional weapons, as a deterrent to the Soviet Union's aggressive ambitions. We should not allow an obvious propaganda film like "The Day After" to be used as a reason for unilateral disarmament.

The things we might learn from that misguided film are:

The United States needs organized civil defense. Why don't we have it?

The leftwingers, pro-Communists and Communists in this country will continue to use every propaganda trick they can conceive to get the USA to unilaterally disarm.

We must not allow our population, brainwashed by Soviet propaganda, to sway our leaders from the most determined military and civil defense of our country.—E.A. Munyan, M.D., 17221 E. 23rd St., Medical Plaza Bldg., Independence, Mo. 64057.

Thanks Post 3373

We in Jackson County Miss., DAV Chapter 46, VFW would like to thank the Commander and members of Post 3373 for all the assistance afforded us when we were trying to get our DAV chapter started. Commander Billy Buffett allowed us to hold our meetings in the Post home and assisted us in many other ways. The bingo committee allowed us nights for raffles to help raise money. The Ladies Auxiliary assisted us in getting off on the right track to support the VA hospital in Biloxi, Miss. As a life member of both organizations, I know how important each is to our veterans. With the kind of help and dedication Commander Buffett has shown us in Chapter 46, I know we will have a great working relationship with each other.—Thomas J. Vernor, Adjutant Treasurer, Jackson County Chapter 46, DAV, Pascagoula, Miss., 39567.

(Opposed to "relocation," Navy intelligence officers estimated the potentially disloyal at 3,500 in the entire U.S. All were known to the authorities. They were drawn largely from the Kibei, those educated in Japan, and members of the Black Dragon Society and other militaristic groups. In June, 1941, Itaru Tachibana, a Japanese naval officer posing as a student, was arrested as a spy. His ring was broken up and he was deported—Editor)

Despite all this, the young men—some as soon as they reached 18—volunteered out of these camps to boost the total of Nisei servicemen to 33,000. More than 35% became casualties and another 1,000 died fighting.

Four decades have passed since the injustice meted out to the Japanese-Americans, but racism, born of ignorance and hate, can still be heard in this land. Were those victories, so hard won by the 442nd, so Pyrrhic?

HOMEOWNERS!

Easy to Handle! PRO's big power driven wheels roll smoothly over any kind of ground...rough terrain, high, heavy grass or soft soil.

Gets job done faster—than even riding mowers in lawns of irregular shape. Easily trims under shrubs, bushes, and trees and on steep slopes it beats riding mowers for safety and traction!

Safer than Ordinary Mowers! Blade is way out front, completely out of reach of feet or hands.

Trouble-Free! Single piece welded tubular steel frame lasts many times longer than typical, cheap stamped metal mowers.

Extra Power! Won't stall out in heavy grass - 5 & 7 HP Models -- up to 24" cutting width.

Mantis Gardeners Cut Weeding Time by 90%!

Read how they do it...

Stop fighting the annual battle with garden weeds! The Mantis ends the weed cycle so you do up to 90% less weeding! Right now — during the peak weed growth months — is the time to act!

Use the lightweight Mantis Tiller/Cultivator to zip through your garden and destroy the sprouting annual weeds while they are young and weak (and before they go to seed). At the same time, you'll be cutting off the new shoots of those nagging perennial weeds that have plagued you for years.

Do this now and you'll stop the weed growth cycle! Amazingly enough, your garden will be virtually weed free thereafter. (We'll include a FREE copy of How To Break The Weed Cycle.)

From now on — and for as long as your garden grows — you will have eliminated 90% of your weeding chores...forever!

Weights Just 20 Pounds!

Because Mantis weighs just 20 lbs., you can maneuver it into tight corners, around plants and along fence lines. Mantis turns on a dime... runs forward or backwards up and down rows... starts with the flick of a wrist... and, best of all, costs less than $300!

3-Week Trial!

Prove it to yourself with our 3-Week In-Your-Garden Home Trial. If you don't absolutely love Mantis, simply return it for a full refund!

Make Up Your Mind

It was Billy's sixth birthday. He had told his parents he wanted a dog more than anything else in the world. When he got home, his father took him into the living room. Standing in the center was a full-grown St. Bernard. Apprehensive, Billy asked, "Is he for me or am I for him?"

Seems Plain Enough

"Captain, there's a personal message to you from the admiral," reported the communications officer.

"Well, read it to me."

The officer read: "Of all the blundering, stupid, dimwitted idiots I've known, you take the cake!"

"Have that decoded at once," snapped the captain.
